Attendance: Students are required to attend class in order to participate and learn from class discussions. If you are unable to attend the class, you should inform the instructors.

Class Participation: Students are expected to participate in class discussions and role play. Furthermore, students will be expected to help further ideas gained from class readings, movies, and lectures.

Quizzes: Students are expected to take 1 quiz before the midterm and 1 quiz between midterm and final. The quizzes will be multiple choice. The dates of the quizzes are listed on the syllabus.

Midterm: The midterm will be an in-class essay exam. Students are supposed to choose 1 out of 3 essays and elaborate with 3 class-readings on the subject matter. A critical analysis of the employed readings (as opposed to just a summary) is required in order to receive the complete percentage.

Compare/Contrast Paper: Students are required to compare and contrast critically two readings selected by the instructors. The focus of the paper will be on how women in different racial groups experienced gender throughout history in the United States.

Final: The final project will be a 5-8 page paper. Students should choose a topic of interest and consult with the instructors. At least one reading listed on the syllabus will be the basis of the critical discussion of the paper.

Final Alternative: Alternatively, students can create a collage about their topic of interest. An additional 3 page paper combined with one class reading should describe the critical gender issue addressed in the collage. The student should consult with the instructor beforehand. You can start this project on the first day of class and turn it in any time before the final is due.

Extra Points: We will select 3 events throughout the semester which deserve an extra point. Each event is worth 3% but you can only accumulate a total of 6% extra credit. In other words you must attend 2 of the three events for 6% extra credit. If you decide to attend another event/occasion for extra point instead of our suggested ones, it must be approved by the instructors and you need to present your findings in class.

PREREQUISITES:

There are no pre-requisites for the course. When reading research articles, it is more important that the main argument is understood and less important that the research method of the article is understood.

COURSE POLICIES:
Respect:
Some themes in this course are socially sensitive. Consequently, respect towards all individuals’ viewpoints will be emphasized in the classroom.

Assignment Format:
All assignments must be double spaced 12pt Times New Roman with 1” margins. The student ID should be on the top of the front page and the document should be stapled. Make sure to get your student id in the beginning of the semester. Note: please don’t put your name on the assignment that we grade.

Late Policy:
If you miss a quiz or the midterm and do not contact one of the instructors within 48 hours of the quiz or midterm date, you will not have an opportunity to make up the quiz or midterm and will receive a grade of zero on that quiz or exam. Any students requesting a make-up exam may be required to provide documentation of extenuating circumstances that interfere with taking the exam as scheduled. The above policy also applies to the final paper/project.

Academic Honesty:
The student id should reflect the work of the student. Although collaborative learning is encouraged – especially when studying for the quizzes and the midterm, the final should only be discussed between the instructor and the student. Citation formats for class readings should follow commonly used formats (e.g. APA or ASA). It’s not ok to just use an author’s name. Questions concerning citation formats will be answered and addressed in class.

Plagiarism—Pls Read:
These guidelines are adapted from Prof. Vernon Lidtke of the Johns Hopkins University (courtesy of Prof. Ken Ledford, Dept. of History, CWRU):
Plagiarism covers a multitude of offenses. It involves the theft of words, ideas or conclusions from another writer. If an academic paper gives the impression that the writer is himself or herself the author of words, ideas or conclusions that are in fact the product of another person’s work, the writer of that paper is guilty of plagiarism. In the following cases, such a misleading impression is given:
1. Failure to give credit for ideas, statements of fact, or conclusions derived from another writer.
2. Failure to use quotation marks when quoting directly from another writer, whether an entire sentence or only a phrase is quoted. In addition, all quotations must always be cited with page numbers.
3. Closed and extended paraphrase of another writer even if credit is given in a citation.
4. Citing a source that is quoted or cited by another author but that has not been examined by the writer of the paper.
These examples do not exhaust the forms that plagiarism may take. Plagiarism is committed whenever and however a writer appears to take credit for work done by another. An entire paper may be plagiarized, as when a student submits a paper written by someone else, or plagiarism may be limited to a single page. While plagiarism may be more or less extensive in a paper, it is always a fraud, and it is always a most serious offense. Plagiarism needs not be deliberate; it may be committed unintentionally through carelessness or ignorance. Since accidental plagiarism in a paper is indistinguishable from deliberate dishonesty, a student must be alert to avoid the sort of carelessness or ignorance that may leave him or her open to a charge of having plagiarized another’s work. The safest rule to follow is: When in doubt, cite.
The penalty in this course for plagiarism is a grade of “F” on the paper and it will be calculated as a zero into the student’s final grade. All cases of plagiarism will be reported to the Dean of Undergraduate Studies as prescribed in General Bulletin. A final note about the Internet: Unfortunately, the Internet is contributing to a rise in plagiarism. However, sophisticated search engines are available for professors to check the authenticity of student work. We consider ethics as an important aspect of this course.

Special Needs:
Students with disabilities who need special assistance should meet with the instructor. Students will not be afforded any special accommodations for their work prior to disclosure of the special need or disability. Furthermore, please get in touch with the Coordinator of Disability Services at CWRU, Susan Sontag (sms17@cwru.edu or 368-5239).

COURSE OBJECTIVES:
After completion of the course, students will be able to recall important sociological milestones in the U.S. gender literature and to apply the knowledge to gender themes discussed in the class and other themes of interest. Despite this course focuses on gender inequalities, we will also emphasize race and ethnicity in the discussions--which cannot be seen separated.

OFFICE HOURS:
We gladly discuss your interests and questions about the course and course materials. We hold regular office hours and we schedule appointments outside those hours.

This syllabus is subject to change (readings, assignments, quizzes, etc.). Please pay close attention to announcements of such changes made either in class or via Blackboard. It is the student’s responsibility to keep informed about such changes. We try to keep the changes at a very minimal level!

“The principle which regulates the existing social relations between the two sexes – the legal subordination of one sex to the other is wrong in itself, and now one of the chief hindrances to human improvement; and…it ought to be replaced by a principle of perfect equality, admitting no power or privilege on the one side, nor disability on the other.”

“Gender is such a familiar part of daily life that it usually takes a deliberate disruption of our expectations of how women and men are supposed to act to pay attention to how it is produced. Gender signs and signals are so ubiquitous that we usually fail to note them - unless they are missing or ambiguous. Then we are uncomfortable until we have successfully placed the other person in a gender status; otherwise, we feel socially dislocated. In our society, in addition to man and woman, the status can be transvestile (a person who dresses in opposite-gender clothes) and transsexual (a person who has had sex-change surgery). Transvestites and transsexuals carefully construct their gender status by dressing, speaking, walking, gesturing in the ways prescribed for women or men whichever they want to be taken for - and so does any “normal” person.”

Judith Lorber (from Paradoxes of Gender, 1995)
"Women are the only exploited group in history who have been idealized into powerlessness."

Erica Jong
