

Aga Khan Hospital
Karachi, Pakistan

Mikal Rahman
1990

I thought I would drop a few lines to let you know that my trip and study at the Aga Khan Hospital in Karachi, Pakistan was a success. I was able to meet Dr. Jack Bryant there several times and he was very helpful and kind. I handed over to him the information package about the Center for International Health and he seemed to be impressed and interested in further contacts between institutions. Many other people have done electives there from the US and elsewhere as well as students from Aga Khan pursuing work in the US.

While there I worked in a urban primary health delivery site in a squatter settlement. The main aim of the Community Health Sciences Department, of which Dr. Bryant is the head, is to implement and develop a system of primary health care for different underserved areas. I regret that I did not take any pictures there as they would have been interesting to show. If anyone would like to contact Dr. Bryant, the address is:

Dr. Jack Bryant
Head, Community Health Sciences Dept
The Aga Khan University Hospital
Stadium Road
Karachi, Pakistan