Case Western Reserve University ranks 9th among 251 research and doctoral universities in the percentage of bachelor’s degree graduates who go on to earn doctorates.

Three out of every four Case Western Reserve University undergraduates participate in research projects with faculty members, and about 20 percent graduate with double or triple majors.

Case Western Reserve University ranks 13th among private institutions in the nation—and 26th among all universities—in federal awards to support research and development.

The number of Case Western Reserve University alumni serving in the Peace Corps has doubled in the last year, making Case 16th in the nation among schools of similar size.

Case Western Reserve University ranks 2nd among private institutions in the nation—and 7th among all universities—in percentage of federal work-study funds used for community service.