

The Alumni Association of Case Western Reserve University

DESTINATION WEEKEND

Julia Bianco (CWR) is a writer whose debut contemporary fantasy novel, Broken Coven (St. Martin's Press), will be released in 2026. She was U.S. assistant to director Jon M. Chu during the production of Wicked. Previous jobs include her role as assistant to screenwriter David Hemingson for the 2023 film The Holdovers, showrunner's assistant on HBO Max's Head of the Class, development assistant at Ryan Seacrest Productions, and talent manager's assistant at Odenkirk-Provissiero Entertainment.

Her writing has been published on the app Chapters and at MTV News, Funny or Die, Screenrant, Looper, Cleveland 19 News and more.

She graduated from Case Western Reserve with double majors in political science and cognitive science and double minors in English and creative writing; she then went on to get her Master of Science in Television Producing and Writing from Boston University. While at Case Western Reserve, she was news editor and later director of web and multimedia for the university's student newspaper The Observer and president of the Footlighters musical theater group.