Professional Activities and Honors

Association for Asian Studies, China and Inner Asia Council (CIAC)'s "E. Gene Smith Inner Asia Book Prize for 2022" for Melvyn C. Goldstein, A History of Modern Tibet, Volume 4: In the Eye of the Storm, 1957-59 (U. of California Press, 2019).

[AWARD CITATION: In this massive tome, the fourth and final volume in Mel Goldstein's magisterial History of Modern Tibet, the author unfolds the events that led to the Lhasa Uprising of 1959, and what Goldstein calls the "End of Old Tibet." Goldstein ably demonstrates that the decisions undertaken by the major political actors of the era, including the Dalai Lama, Mao Zedong, and many others, ultimately generated an outcome that no one really wanted. Goldstein's meticulous handling of an impressive range of actors in this distressing drama, including Tibetans, Chinese, and Americans, leaves the reader and the specialist not only with much to think about, but also with many new available materials to explore further. The author's nuanced and unprejudiced descriptions and analyses rely on an unprecedented wealth of primary sources in multiple languages (primarily Tibet and Chinese), both oral and written, collected over many years, and overcoming countless challenges, many of them also available online through the Tibetan Oral History Archive Project. With this volume, Goldstein has achieved a remarkable feat.]

Distinguished University Professor, Case Western Reserve University, 2020

Elected Member, National Academy of Sciences, Section 51, Anthropology, 2009-present.

Distinguished Research Award, Case Western Reserve University, 2016

The Association for Asian Studies' Joseph Levenson Prize for best monograph on Twentieth-Century China in 1989: Honorable Mention: ("A History of Modern Tibet, 1913-51: The Demise of the Lamaist State").

[AWARD CITATION: This monumental study is a path-breaking contribution to our understanding of modern Tibet. Melvyn Goldstein has marshalled an impressive array of documentary, archival and interview sources to provide critical new insights into the political and diplomatic history of Tibet during its independence of Chinese domination. Particularly important is the author's use of Tibetan sources to go beyond the question of Tibet's relation to China, and narrate in detail the conflicts within Tibetan society: between monastic and lay elements, between reformers and conservatives, between rival regents' cliques. The Levinson Prize

Committee of the China and Inner Asia Council is proud to give Honorable Mention to Professor Goldstein for this impressive contribution to the development of an important part of our field.]
