UPCOMING EVENT: TOUR OF THE COZAD-BATES HOUSE AND INTERPRETIVE CENTER

FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 1 2024 FROM 11:00 A.M. - NOON.

The Cozad-Bates house was originally built by Andrew Cozad for his son Justus. The oldest section dates from 1853 with sections added in the 1860s and 1872. It is the only pre-Civil War house remaining in University Circle. The Cozads and their neighbors the Fords were very active in the anti-slavery movement and in the Underground Railroad. The Gund Foundation West Wing deals with slavery in the years leading up to the Civil War both nationally and locally. The Cleveland Foundation East Wing focuses on local anti-slavery activists and those freedom-seekers who passed through. The Key Bank Community Room deals with the impacts of slavery today in an exhibition developed by the Case Western Reserve University Social Justice Institute. ## LECTURE DAY RECAP

Lecture Day was held October 14, 2024 at Judson Manor. It was its usual huge success. 73 people attended (the maximum we could accept was 75). The topic was AI, Medicine and You. We had two excellent speakers – Michael Hinczewski PhD from the Department of Physics at CWRU who managed to explain AI and how it relates to his area of interest which is how cancer cells and bacteria develop resistance to our medical therapies; and Paul J Ford PhD from the Center for Bioethics at the Cleveland Clinic Foundation. He sits on the AI committee at the Clinic and spoke about how AI affects what we feel is ethical and unethical in the medical setting.

COMING SOON

- The Book Discussion Day Committee hopes to have a book chosen by early December so we can all start reading.
- There will be a Winter Cleveland Gems Tour – read all about it in our next issue!
