

Award Winning Israeli Author and Journalist, Lee Yaron, to Visit Case Western Reserve University's Siegal Lifelong Learning

Siegal Lifelong Learning at Case Western Reserve University will host Lee Yaron, award winning Israeli author and journalist for two upcoming in-person lectures. Beyond The Headlines: Hope, Resilience, And Israel's Future will be held on Wednesday, May 6 from 6:30 - 8 PM and Words That Move The World: Journalism As The Catalyst For Societal Change will be held on Thursday, May 7 from 10:30 Am to Noon. Both lectures are free for members and $5 for nonmembers and will be held at Siegal Lifelong Learning, Landmark Centre Building, 25700 Science Park Drive, Suite 100 in Beachwood.

Lee Yaron's visit offers lifelong learners a rare opportunity to hear directly from one of Israel's most compelling young journalists documenting one of Israel's most tragic events in recent history. A reporter for Haaretz, Yaron is known for investigative journalism that has exposed corruption and social injustices and has even prompted government inquiries and policy discussions in Israel.

Her recent book, 10/7: 100 Human Stories, presents deeply researched accounts of individuals and communities affected by the October 7 attacks. The book received the National Jewish Book Award and the Natan Notable Books Award, and Yaron was also honored with the Yitzhak Livni "Knight" Award for Free Speech in Media.

According to Dafna Ben Yosef, Director, Jewish Lifelong Learning, "audiences are drawn to Yaron's lectures because she combines rigorous journalism with deeply human and personal storytelling. Rather than focusing only on political analysis, she brings forward personal voices and authentic lived experiences that allow audiences to understand the broader historical and social impact of the October 7 horrific events. Yaron's talks will offer both insight and meaningful reflection on Israel's reality."
