Cleveland IDEAS Symposium 2018

September 16 – 18, 2018 | Basic Science Workshop
September 22, 2018 | Clinical Course

Overview

The Cleveland IDEAS (International Digestive Education And Science) Symposium 2018 is the second of a biennial series of comprehensive educational activities that will encompass a Basic Science workshop for research-oriented physicians and scientists and a clinical Gastroenterology/Hepatology course covering current topics and leading edge technologies in the field of gastrointestinal and liver diseases.

The Basic Science workshop (non-CME) will gather together international and national experts in the field of gastrointestinal diseases to provide a series of state-of-the-art basic presentations regarding cytokines/inflammatory bowel disease, the gut microbiome and its impact on other organs, and mucosal immunology beyond the gut. The Young Investigator Symposium during the Basic Science workshop, will focus on the development of Young Investigators through oral and poster presentations, a round table session on funding opportunities in gastroenterology diseases, and networking opportunities with senior investigators.

The Clinical course (CME) will provide the most recent and relevant information presented by local and international experts, incorporating evidence-based guidelines pertaining to clinical practice, allowing attendees to appreciate and utilize expert insight and optimal strategies into their daily practice.

This symposium is for research scientists, physicians, associates, post-doctoral fellows, gastroenterologists, hepatologists, surgeons, nurse practitioners and nurses.

Accreditation Statement

Case Western Reserve University School of Medicine is accredited by the Accreditation Council for Continuing Medical Education to provide continuing medical education for physicians.

Case Western Reserve University School of Medicine designates this live activity for a maximum of 6.5 AMA PRA Category 1 Credits™. Physicians should claim only the credit commensurate with the extent of their participation in the activity.

Program Learning Objectives

1. Recognize and interpret major advances in the clinical practice of gastroenterology and hepatology.
2. Incorporate the most up-to-date diagnostic approaches to gastroenterology and liver disorders.
3. Choose therapeutic options for gastroenterology and liver disorders in an evidence-based manner.
4. Manage patients with both common and rare gastroenterology and liver disorders using established guidelines with expert input.

Attendees may contact DHRI@case.edu if family care is needed.

About Us

University Hospitals Digestive Health Institute is dedicated to providing high-quality health care. Patient-centered experiences are focused on privacy and value. Our physicians, surgeons and advanced practitioners are located throughout our integrated academic medical system. Expert medical and surgical teams collaborate to provide comprehensive, compassionate care for each patient. Programs range from essential preventive screening and wellness initiatives to the most complex care for advanced diseases, such as inflammatory bowel disease and gastrointestinal cancers.

Our gastroenterologists, hepatologists, surgeons, nurses, dietitians and many other caregivers are committed to the University Hospitals mission:

To Heal. To Teach. To Discover.

Case Western Reserve University Digestive Health Research Institute (DHRI) was established on July 1, 2015, under the leadership of Inaugural Director Fabio Cominelli, MD, PhD. The DHRI houses a robust organizational infrastructure capable of supporting and promoting interdisciplinary basic-science, translational and clinical research.

The mission of the Digestive Health Research Institute is threefold:

1. Ensure a better future for patients struggling with devastating digestive diseases by translating novel basic science discoveries into our clinics
2. Expose all levels of trainees to a meaningful research experience with the ultimate goal of promoting enhanced career interest in GI research
3. Develop stewards of GI research in the communities we serve through collaboration, resource sharing and patient care.

The DHRI aims to equip and empower global leaders in digestive disease research and treatment to provide our most valuable stakeholders, patients, a cure.
