Stacy Brubaker is a certified adult-geriatric nurse practitioner who specializes in geriatric care. Her clinical experience includes working with older adults in multiple types of facilities emphasizing health promotion and wellness while managing chronic disease, determining appropriate pharmacological therapy, ordering tests, and collaborating with an interdisciplinary team to provide evidenced-based care. She is the Charlene Phelps Nurse Practitioner at Judson, as part of the Charlene Phelps Collaborative for Older Adult and Family Engagement.

As part her work with the Phelps Collaborative, she educates nursing students from Case Western Reserve University's Frances Payne Bolton School of Nursing about geriatric care, while engaging in a clinical practice. She also conducts research with older adults including a research study involving the accuracy of pedometers in the older adult population. She holds a Master of Science in Nursing (MSN) and a Master of Nursing (MN) from Case Western Reserve University. In addition, she also holds undergraduate and graduate degrees in music.

Ms. Brubaker practices at Judson Park and Judson Manor.

She can be reached at the health clinic or by email at sbrubaker@judsonsmartliving.org.
