Executive Summary

More members of the Case Western Reserve University (CWRU) graduating class of 2017 chose to enter the workplace (53%) than pursue advanced degrees (37%). This is only the second time in ten years that 50% or more of the class entered the workforce directly upon graduation (the only other time was with the class of 2015). For those beginning their careers, the highest numbers entered, in descending order, the fields of engineering, nursing, information technology, research, and financial services. In smaller numbers, they also chose work in education/teaching, accounting, and healthcare/public health.

Cleveland (122) remained the most popular destination for graduates beginning their careers, followed in large numbers by San Francisco (33) and New York City (29). Impressive numbers were also drawn to other urban settings including Washington, DC, Boston, Chicago, and Los Angeles. Fifteen graduates accepted offers outside the United States including China (4), Japan (2), and the Czech Republic, Germany, India, Peru, South Africa, and the United Arab Emirates, with one graduate each.

Overall, the number of graduates pursuing an advanced degree was down four percentage points from last year, with a particularly noteworthy change in the number of graduates entering medical school: 13% of advanced degree seekers, down 23% from last year. Otherwise, the quality and diversity of universities and disciplines remained impressive.

Methodology

The 2017 First Destination Survey was distributed to 1,200 graduating seniors using a web-based technique. Students who initially indicated they were still available for employment received a follow up survey. Overall, 57% (n = 685) of seniors responded to the two surveys. Post-graduation outcomes data were also collected from faculty, staff, social media, and other online sources (e.g., academic program websites) to determine the knowledge rate, the percentage of graduates for whom we have knowledge about their first-destination career outcomes. In total, post-graduation career outcomes data were collected for 86% of graduates (n = 1,026/1,200).

The First Destination Survey was distributed in three stages throughout the academic year: August 2016, January 2017, and May 2017. An email was sent to graduates with a link to the survey beginning approximately two weeks prior to the end of the semester, and continued to be sent every two weeks to all non-respondents through October 2017.

Appendix A includes a copy of the First Destination Survey used to capture the information contained in this report. The survey was administered using Qualtrics, an assessment vendor contracted by Case Western Reserve University.
