

The Provost Scholars Program

University Intensive Seminar – Session 2

Police and Community Relations

Date: January 30, 2020 | 2:30PM - 5:00PM | Guilford House Dining Room

Purpose

The goal of this seminar is to have an informal discussion on social engagement and relationships between the community and police. The subject of the importance and relevance of community policing will be addressed as well. The Scholars are encouraged to come with questions and ideas.

Presenters: Chief Jay H. Hodge; Director Art Hardee; Director Frank Demes

Chief Jay H. Hodge is the Chief of Police for Case Western Reserve University. Throughout Hodge's leadership tenure, he has been working to re-energize the police and security department and advance the reputation as a respected department through training, discipline, accountability, and stimulating creativity and growth. Hodge is committed to building the police department's internal and external relationships by focusing on strong customer service. It is one of his goals to make CWRU Police Department one of the top university police departments in the State of Ohio. Chief Hodge and former Chief Director Art Hardee began their law enforcement careers in the city of East Cleveland. Director Demes started at George Washington University in Washington D.C.

Objectives

At the end of the seminar, the Provost Scholars will:

- Identify at least two meaningful aspects of community policing.
- Determine at least three ways to improve engagement between community and police.
