Session Nineteen – Spring 2015
Thursday, April 2nd, 2015, 2:30pm-5:00pm
Guilford House, 11112 Bellflower Road, Cleveland, OH 44106

Purpose

The Provost Scholars will have an opportunity to learn about the personal networks of women with substance use disorders from Dr. Elizabeth Tracy, an Associate Professor at the Mandel School of Applied Social Sciences. Dr. Tracy will also discuss how building social networks is a treatment goal for women with substance issues.

Presenter Biography

Dr. Elizabeth M. Tracy is the Grace Longwell Coyle Professor in Social Work at the Jack, Joseph and Morton Mandel School of Applied Social Sciences. She teaches courses in direct social work practice theory and methods in the master's level program and a seminar in social work education and teaching in the doctoral program. She has also directed the school social work program that leads to licensure through the Ohio Department of Education for master's level and post master's level students. Reflecting her interest in schools and families, she has served on the advisory board to the Center for Math and Science Education and the University Center for Innovation in Teaching and Education (UCITE). She has also served as faculty associate of the Schubert Center for Child Development, and as a University Affiliate of the Ohio Mental Health Network for School Success. For more information about Dr. Tracy, please visit: <http://msass.case.edu/faculty/etracy/>.
