

PERI (Partnership for Evaluation, Research and Implementation)

PERI at Case Western Reserve University assists nonprofit and governmental organizations in the health and human services sector with measuring program outcomes, a practice that enhances an organization's likelihood of securing future funding for the critical services they provide in the community.

By providing quality evaluation consultation and support at a low-cost, PERI is well-suited to partner with nonprofits. Since 2016, PERI's expert evaluators have helped Cleveland-area agencies to demonstrate their impact at a fraction of the market cost.

Through PERI's services, nonprofits can:

- Customize an evaluation plan to meet the unique needs of their clients and agency.
- Inform quality improvement and demonstrate program success with data that tell their story.
- Collaborate with experts in nonprofit program evaluation at Case Western Reserve University.
- Receive affordable evaluation services made possible by funding from foundations.
- Increase the likelihood of obtaining future funding at the local, state, and federal levels.

Agencies are selected for PERI services through a proposal process. Requests for proposals (RFPs) are released several times throughout the year. If you would like to be added to the PERI email distribution list to receive future RFPs and PERI updates, please email your request to: peri@case.edu.
