

Jeff M. Kretschmar is a Research Associate Professor at the Jack, Joseph, and Morton Mandel School of Applied Social Sciences of Case Western Reserve University and Managing Director of the Begun Center for Violence Prevention Research and Education at MSASS. He also serves as the Director of the Begun Center's Partnership for Evaluation, Research, and Implementation (PERI). Since 2006, Dr. Kretschmar has served as the Principal Investigator (PI) on the evaluation of Ohio's Behavioral Health/Juvenile Justice Initiative, a diversion program for juvenile justice-involved youth with behavioral health issues. Dr. Kretschmar also serves as the PI for the evaluation of the Cuyahoga County's Domestic Violence Homicide Reduction Program, sponsored by the Office on Violence against Women, and PI for the evaluation of a new High-Risk Domestic Violence felony docket with the Cuyahoga County Court of Common Pleas, sponsored by the Bureau of Justice Assistance. He is also lead evaluator for several specialized docket evaluations, including two federally-funded juvenile drug court dockets, a federally-funded family treatment court docket, two juvenile human trafficking dockets, and two juvenile mental health dockets. Specialized dockets are designed to provide more effective treatment options to those who participate in the dockets. Dr. Kretschmar has presented the findings from his research at national and international conferences in the criminal/juvenile justice, mental/behavioral health, and related fields and has published these results in various professional journals. Prior to joining CWRU, he served as Project Director for the Institute for the Study and Prevention of Violence at Kent State University. Dr. Kretschmar received his Ph.D. in Social Psychology from Miami University.

- Serves as the PI for several local, state, and federal research/evaluation projects
- Directs the Partnership for Evaluation, Research, and Implementation (PERI)
- Engaged in substantial grant, report, and manuscript writing.