Introduction

The 2016-17 Internship Survey was administered using Qualtrics, a web-based assessment vendor, over approximately four weeks during August – September 2017 to 3,818 returning undergraduate students. Students were asked to report on their internship experiences over the time period Fall 2016 – Summer 2017. There were 1,358 individuals who responded to the survey for a response rate of 36%. Appendix A includes a copy of the survey.

Internship Participation

Students were asked whether or not they had participated in an internship, defined as a work-based learning experience, typically related to one's major field of study and/or intended career, which could be full-time or part-time, paid or unpaid, with no course enrollment. Six hundred twelve (45%) students reported that they participated in at least one internship within this timeframe; 47 students reported participating in two internships; for a total of 659 internships reported.

Timing

Of the 659 internships reported, 634 (96%) had information about which semester(s) the internship took place. Ninety-one percent (n = 577) took place during one semester, seven percent (n = 44) took place over two semesters, and two percent (n = 13) took place over three semesters. Summer was the most popular time of year for students to complete internships with 530 (84%) taking place exclusively during the summer, and 46 more taking place over summer plus one or more semesters.

Timing	n	%
Fall 2016	24	4%
Fall 2016, Spring 2017	11	2%

Spring 2017	23	4%
Spring 2017, Summer 2017	24	4%
Summer 2017	530	84%

Qualifications

Six hundred seven (92%) responses were recorded regarding the relationship between students' major and internship. Of those who answered the question, 46% (n = 278) responded that their major was required for the internship and the internship was related to their field of study, while 41% (n = 251) responded that their major was not required but helped them get the internship.

Position Function

Of the 659 internships reported, 612 (93%) responses contained information about the function of the internship.

Compensation

Students were asked whether the experiences were paid or unpaid, as well as the hourly wage range. Information about whether or not the experience was paid was obtained for 612 (93%) of the internships, with 83% (n = 505) being paid experiences and 17% (n = 107) being unpaid.

A pay rate was indicated for 99% (n = 499) of the 505 paid experiences. The most frequently reported pay range was $14.01 - $16.00 per hour, with 18% of internships paying a rate in this range.

Students reported that 24 internships paid $30.00 or more per hour. These internships took place at 15 different companies, eight (33%) of which are on the Fortune 500 list, and six of which are on the Fortune 100 list. The table below indicates the most common position functions of these highly paid internships. In looking at the position titles, fifteen (63%) were related to software development and testing, four (17%) were in consulting, and four (17%) were in engineering.

Of the 107 unpaid internships, the position functions with the greatest number of unpaid were Research (n = 36), Engineering (n = 12), Healthcare/Public Health (n = 12), Politics/Law (n = 12), and Business/Administration (n = 9).

<sup>1</sup> Students are counted once for each major. Undeclared students with an intended major on record are grouped with that major (e.g., Accounting – Intended is grouped with Accounting). Engineering, Management, Pre-Law, Pre-Medicine, and Unknown/Undecided are not actual majors, but are intended majors of record. All majors contained at least one person with a double major except Dean’s Approved Major, Environmental Geology, Evolutionary Biology, Nursing, Nutritional Biochemistry & Metabolism, and World Literature.

<sup>2</sup> Majors with fewer than five responses to this question are excluded in order to maintain individuals’ privacy.

Hours Worked

Students were asked how many hours per week they typically worked during their internships. This information was obtained for 609 (92%) of the internships. The most frequent number of hours worked was 31-40 hours per week, reported in 55% (n = 332) of the internships. Another 23% (n = 140) of students reported working 40 or more hours per week.

Of the 140 internships in which individuals who reported working more than 40 hours per week, the majority, 122 (87%), were paid. These internships were spread across all of the pay levels, with $20.01-$22.00 per hour being the most frequently reported range, by 17% (n = 20) of respondents. Ninety-one percent (n=127) of these internships took place in the U.S.

These experiences were also spread across position functions, with Engineering (n = 53) and Research (n = 27) having the greatest numbers of internships where people reported working more than 40 hours per week.

Outcomes

Students were asked about the outcome of their internships, and 607 (92%) responses were received. Fifty-nine percent (n = 360) of those who participated in internships received an offer of a full-time position, a part-time position, or another internship. Forty-one percent (n = 249) did not receive an offer.

Offers	Outcomes n	Outcomes %
Full-time, permanent position, following graduation	91	15%
Another internship or a part-time position, following graduation	28	5%
Another internship or a part-time position, for summer 2017	123	20%
Another internship or a part-time position for the following academic year	116	19%
None of these	249	41%

A follow-up question was asked about whether or not the 358 offers received were accepted. The majority (49%) were still deciding on whether or not to accept the offer at the time they responded to the survey.

Offer Accepted	n	%
Yes	122	34%
Still deciding	176	49%
No	60	17%

Internship Recommended

Students were asked whether or not they would recommend their internship site to other Case Western Reserve University students and 586 (89%) responses were received. The majority, 89% (n = 524), responded affirmatively.

Career Plan Decidedness

Students were asked how decided about their career plans they were prior to and following their most recent internship, with options being Decided, Somewhat Decided, Somewhat Undecided, and Undecided. Five hundred eighty-seven (89%) responses were received.

Three hundred eighty-eight (66%) reported being Decided or Somewhat Decided prior to their internship.

Decidedness Before Internship	n	%
Decided	134	23%
Somewhat decided	254	43%
Somewhat undecided	138	24%
Undecided	61	10%

Four hundred sixty-six (79%) reported being Decided or Somewhat Decided following their internship.

Decidedness After Internship	n	%
Decided	207	35%
Somewhat decided	259	44%
Somewhat undecided	88	15%
Undecided	33	6%

For those who initially reported being Decided or Somewhat Decided before their internship, the majority stayed as decided as they were prior to the internship. More specifically, of the 134 who reported being Decided before their internship, 122, (91%) reported remaining Decided following the internship. Of the 254 who reported being Somewhat Decided before their internship, 165 (65%) reported remaining Somewhat Decided following the internship, and 76 (30%) reported becoming more decided.

For those who initially reported being Undecided or Somewhat Undecided before their internship, the majority in each group became more decided following the internship. More specifically, of the 61 who reported being Undecided before their internship, 32 (52%) reported being more decided following their internship and 29 (48%) reported staying Undecided. Of the 138 who reported being Somewhat Undecided before their internship, 82 (59%) reported being more decided following the internship.

Internships by School/College

Students in the Case School of Engineering and Weatherhead School of Management participated in at least one internship at the same rate or greater than the rate of all students. Students in the College of Arts and Sciences, Frances Payne Bolton School of Nursing, and Undergraduate Studies participated in internships at a lower rate than did students in the other schools and college and all students.

International Students

There are a limited number of options (e.g., Cooperative Education, Practicum) available to international students<sup>3</sup> that meet the requirements for Curricular Practical Training (CPT) and/or Optional Practical Training (OPT), and for purposes of this report, students were asked to report data on internships only, not experiences obtained through courses. Five hundred three international students were invited to complete the Internship Survey, and 116 responded to the survey for a response rate of 23%. Of those 116 students, 26 (22%) reported having an internship during the time period Fall 2016 – Summer 2017. One student reported having more than one internship, for a total of 27 internships. Location was reported for 26 of the internships. Fourteen (54%) internships took place in the U.S., and the remainder took place in China (n = 10), India (n = 1), and Japan (n = 1).

<sup>3</sup> International students are a unique subset of the student population in that their ability to legally work in the United States is significantly more limited than U.S. students. According to the Case Western Reserve University International Student Services FAQ website, “F-1 and J-1 students are eligible to work on-campus. Those who are registered full-time may work no more than 20 hours per week during the semester and 40 hours per week during breaks and the summer. There is also the option for F-1 Practical Training or J-1 Academic Training . . . F-1 students who have been in status for 9 consecutive months are eligible to apply for practical training. Students may apply for Curricular Practical Training (CPT) if the internship or job experience is an integral part of the curriculum. Students can apply for Optional Practical Training (OPT) before or after the completion of studies.”
